WIFE GETS DIVORCE FROM "GOODY-GOODY"

Wealthy Merchant Cast Off by Spouse for Failure to Break Dishes and Swear During Married Life.

Oakland, Cal., March 8.—Edwin Hirsch, a wealthy Irvington merchant, never stays out late at night; he does not use tobacco nor drink liquor; he is a very even-tempered man; he never scolds his wife nor used profanity in her presence and now he has no wife. The court here today granted Hirsch a decree of divorce on the ground of desertion. "If you only had beaten me occasionally," Mrs. Hirsch said to her spouse the day he went away, "I might have kept on loving you. Or if you had found fault with me, scolded me, broke a dish or a chair occasionally—anything but this monotonous 'goody-goody' business," she then shrugged her shoulders, snapped her fingers and ejaculated: "That's it."

"It's strange, isn't it?" Mrs. Hirsch asked her husband as she stood in the doorway just before leaving him forever. "Lovable men are never nice and most men are seldom amiable." Then she went out and closed the door behind her and Hirsch sat sighing.

DEATH IN ELECTRIC CHAIR AWAITS NEGRO

Joseph Roberts, Murderer of Isaac S. Vogel of New York Will Pay Extreme Penalty Monday.

New York, March 8.—Condemned to die for one of the most fiendish murders committed in this city in recent years, Joseph Roberts, a West Indian negro, will pay the extreme penalty of the law in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison next Monday. Roberts was convicted of the murder of Isaac S. Vogel, an aged and wealthy dealer in diamonds and jewelry, whose body was discovered in a loft building in Canal Street early last December. Roberts was the elevator conductor in the building. The negro is supposed to have committed the murder for the purpose of robbing, as Mr. Vogel carried much jewelry about his person. After hearing the aged man to death the negro made an ineffectual attempt to burn the body of his victim in the furnace. The crime was fixed upon Roberts when the police discovered the negro's bloody finger prints upon the silver cigarette case which belonged to the murdered man.

SIX PERSONS DEAD IN LODGING HOUSE FIRE IN CHICAGO

One Man Jumps to Death From Upper Story Window—Others are Suffocated by Smoke.

Chicago, March 8.—Six men were killed and one injured in a fire which destroyed a Clark street lodging house today. Fifty men were rescued in an upper story when the flames were discovered.

Thomas McNath, forty years old, a painter, was instantly killed by jumping from an upper story window. The other victims were suffocated by smoke.

Oscar Amen, thirty-eight years old, jumped from the fourth story window into the life net held by firemen and was severely injured by striking a sign which protruded from the building.

Two unidentified men were found suffocated on the top floor of the fourth story.

Shortly after five o'clock firemen entered the scene and fire Marshal Boyce declared the opinion that there were more bodies on the third floor, which could not be reached because of the dense smoke.

At 9:15 o'clock firemen had recovered five bodies from the building and the blaze had been gotten under control.

There is a strong probability that more than twice that number of bodies will be found on the upper floor when the firemen can enter the building.

The establishment housed seventy-five men, according to the proprietor, when the flames were discovered and many of them on the upper floor were remote from assistance. The first alarm carried with it the report that one man was killed, consequently the number of men killed was increased by one or two as the firemen penetrated further into the building.

Many of the men fled, escaping from the lodging house into the street, so that it was impossible to determine how many were still in the building when the fire was gotten under control.

Fear that many more men had perished was dispelled when the firemen entered the building after the flames were under control and found the compartments where the men had been sleeping empty. Survivors told vivid tales of their escape from death in a locked door, a struggle to break down a locked door flung.

Frank Hickey, a painter, with a crowd of fifteen men he rushed to the first floor to a door at the rear, but found it locked.

"We beat upon the door," said Hickey, "but could not break it down. Finally all of us got back to the second floor and to the fire escape. The counterweights would not work, however, and we were compelled to slide down a chain and drop to the ground."

CHAMP CLARK LAUDS DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Speaks of Fine Work of Democrats in Congress in Talk Before Kentucky Legislature.

Frankfort, Ky., March 8.—Speaker Champ Clark of the national house a guest in the capital of his native state, today recanted to the Kentucky legislature the record made by the democratic party in Congress. "We have absolutely kept faith to the people," he asserted. "We have redeemed or are in process of redeeming every promise we made. Declaring that the tariff and question of trust control will overshadow all other issues of the coming presidential campaign speaker Clark said, "It has been given out in a manner which seems authoritative that Pres. Taft proposes to veto any tariff bills we may pass. We welcome the issue. We don't believe it can be bluffed out of the way. The present tariff law raises about $230,000,000 a year. It is estimated that every time one dollar goes into Uncle Sam's coffers under the high protective tariff system about $5 goes into the pockets of the tariff barons, this being true. Then the high protective tariff costs the people of this country a billion and a half yearly. It is a gross outrage and cruelty upon the tax payers."

TAFT IN CHICAGO TO MAKE SPEECH

PRESIDENT REACHES WINDY CITY EARLY THIS MORNING.

POLITICIANS GREETED

Talked This Afternoon at the Armour Institute—Big Address This Evening.

Chicago, March 8.—President Taft arrived here today at 7 o'clock this morning and was greeted by a crowd of several hundred at the railway station. Escorting by the reception committee he went directly to a downtown hotel for breakfast.

See Friends.

While he was at breakfast President Taft received a number of political visitors. Among these were Governor Charles S. Deneen, David H. Forgan, President of the Taft club, Roy O. West, chairman of the republican state central committee, and postmaster Daniel Campbell.

His Address.

"Great reforms are achieved by thoughtful consideration and not by impetuous legislation," said President Taft in addressing a crowd of students at the Armour Institute of Technology today. He admonished his hearers to "be a bit slow about schemes to reform the world" and when a number of students arose to greet the sentiment with a chorus of college yells, President Taft said, "and I wish a bit slow about that too, for I believe there was some other method of expressing approval than by college yells."

Give Advice.

Addressing the students the president said "I would not discourage you in your efforts towards progress. All I ask is that you apply the tests of human nature. Progress is always being made wherever education prevails. He optimistic boys, because you get jolly don't think the whole world is against you. One man does not make a multitude any more than one swallow makes a summer."

Opportunity Comes.

"The only thing the country can do is to make more perfect the equality of opportunity. The opportunity that comes to Americans today is greater than that which comes to any other people in the world."

Will Answer.

Oyster Bay, N.Y., March 8.—President Taft's speech at Toledo yesterday probably will draw an extended reply from Col. Roosevelt. After reading the speech today Col. Roosevelt declined to comment at present, remarking that anything he might have to say upon the subject would be said later on, after he had time to consider the matter. He did not indicate whether his reply would take the form of a speech, magazine article or statement.

Looks for Victory.

Col. Roosevelt said that just now he was concerned chiefly with the subject of presidential preferential primaries. Referring to his political opponents he said they were "fighting tooth and nail" in Michigan and Illinois against the primaries. "If they are established," he said, "I feel sure we will win. If they are not, we have a slight chance."

WIFE'S THREATS AS TOLD IN NIGHTMARE

Grace Tells Attorneys How Spouse Had Troubled Dreams in Which She Threatened Him.

Atlanta, Ga., March 8.—"I might kill you at any time," said Grace, the wife of Eugene H. Grace, charged with shooting him, told him one morning after she had emerged from a stupor that had been troubled with unpleasant dreams.

Grace, it is said, told his attorneys yesterday all about the nightmares that his wife had been having for three weeks prior to the shooting. Attorney for Grace were told that Mrs. Grace talked out loud in her dreams and that her husband, Ohio, who died in Philadelphia was the central figure and that he seemed to be menacing her.

Whether these dreams were real or whether it is puzzling the attorneys who are trying to clear up the shooting mystery. Mrs. Grace maintains her innocence in jail.

It is reported that attorneys for the defense are making an effort to allow her to make another bail even larger than that at which she was first released of $7,000. The condition of her husband is improving, and another bond will be named today.

CAN NORWAY CLAIM SOUTH POLE LAND?

International Law Authorities Discuss Right to Antarctic Territory Through Amundsen Discovery.

New York, March 8.—The question of whether Norway owns the territory surrounding the South Pole which has just been discovered by Amundsen has already begun to be discussed by authorities on international law concerning the ownership of Arctic and Antarctic lands.

Ever since 1778 when Captain Cook's expedition planted a flag in the Arctic regions, explorers of various nations have carried the flag of their country to various points in an attempt to reach the South Pole.

It is generally believed that the land in the Antarctic will be regarded in much the same way as the ice in the Spitzbergen Archipelago which is inhabited by men of various nations and is now regarded as joint possession of all mankind.

Prof. Moore says that the task of effective occupancy of a territory in the South Pole region would undoubtedly prove more difficult than would the discovery, and that it was extremely unlikely that the question of ownership would ever be brought up for joint commission arbitration for settlement.

MILITARY TYRANT OF HAITI IS CONDEMNED

General Caico, Former Ruler of Island, Will Meet Death for Cruel Acts.

Haiti, March 8.—Gen. General Jules Caico, who was at the time of the outbreak in 1908 military commander of the district, was chiefly known for his tyrannical acts. ## FRANCE FORCES CRISIS IN MEXICO.

Washington, D. C.—It is stated in well informed circles that for the past three weeks European powers, and particularly France, have been contemplating the immediate dispatch of war ships to Mexico in order to protect their individual interests. In view of the statement given out recently to the powers that the United States in its present position cannot guarantee protection to Europe in Mexico, this has particular significance.

The sending by France of the armored cruiser "Ducasse" from Rio Janeiro to Vera Cruz may awaken the United States to a realization of the duty to Mexico in the Monroe Doctrine is to be upheld. For the past ten days 25,000 of Uncle Sam's standing army have been practically sleeping on their arms and are ready at a moment's notice to journey southward. ### BASEBALL NOTES

It is said that Pitcher Buck O'Brien, of the Boston Red Sox, received a host of a thousand dollars over his contract of last year, but refuses to sign the document.

According to records the Boston Nationals should have a good hitting outfield this season. Campbell hit for .312, Miller for .333 and Jackson tops the list with .347.

Eddie Evers, brother of the famous Johnny Evers of the Chicago Nationals, has entered professional baseball and signed up with the Wilkes-Barre team of the New York State League.

Manager Bill Dahlen has been given charge of the Brooklyn team and President Ebbetts says the manager will not receive any official interference during the coming season.

President Charles W. Murphy, of the Chicago Cubs, threatens to write a book entitled "The Life of Post Schulte." Mr. Schulte is the celebrated fence dealer of the Cubs, real poet and fancy man.

April 18, a great day in Chicago, for on that date Manager Hank O'Day will lead his Cincinnati Reds in battle against the Cubs. Hank was born and reared in the Windy City and the fans will be on hand to welcome him.

Mr. John J. McGraw, the genial director of baseball at the Polo grounds, New York City, U. S. A., has introduced lawn tennis among the gentlemen representing the National League in the metropolis of America. Just fancy, such an undertaking in the states.

The International League clubs have picked their training camps as follows: Providence, Savannah, Georgia; Baltimore, Rochester, Annapolis, Alabama; Toronto, Macon, Georgia; Jersey City, Bordonia; Newark, Pottersburg, Virginia; Buffalo, Athens, Georgia; Montreal, Charlottesville, Virginia.

The Rochester champions will open the International League season on ### APRIL 18, IN PROVIDENCE.

Paul Molan, formerly with the Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns, has signed with the Toledo club.

"Sniffing Al" Orth, the former big league pitcher, has landed back in the Virginia League, this time as an umpire.

"Hack" Engle says the only way the youngsters can win the second base job with the Boston Red Sox is for them to toss him off a bridge.

President Ebbetts, of the Brooklyn club, can take things easy until the opening of the season, as he has no holdouts among the Superbas.

Pitcher Tony, of the Cubs, the fellow who lifted the end of a battleship, or something like that, has joined Heinie Zimmerman in the hold-out division.

"Stuffy" Meindels' broken wrist, which kept him out of the world's series last fall, is entirely healed. He is working out with the Athletics at San Antonio, and looks fit.

Thomas J. O'Connor, of Erie, Pa., has been elected vice-president of the Central League. He will look after the eastern end of the 12-club circuit, and President Dr. Carson will take care of the western cities.

Sources Mendon and Conte, sporting editors from Havana, will meet the Cincinnati team in Columbus, Ga., and remain during the training trip in order to watch the work of Marsans and Almeida, the Cuban players.

President Jim McAleer, of the Boston Red Sox, says that he played with the Brewers of Milwaukee in 1878. Jim must have been a pretty bright youngster to break into the big league at the age of ten.

The New England League will put over something a little out of the ordinary when it opens the season April 19 with morning games. April 19, "Lexington Day," is a holiday in Massachusetts, hence the morning and afternoon pastimes.

Manager Larry Schlarly says the

JERSEY CITY "SKOOTERS" ARE SURE PUNANT WINNERS BECAUSE THEY SAIL FOR THEIR TRAINING GROUNDS IN BERMUDA ON MARCH 13. IT DOESN'T SEEM REASONABLE, BUT THEN YOU NEVER CAN TELL WHAT THE "PEAK" WILL DO.

A short time ago Hugh Jennings said he didn't care to sign college players for his Detroit team, and now he says a college player entering the professional ranks, should demand $3,000 salary right off the reel. Evidently Hugh wants the other managers to pay the 3,000 bones.

Some critics once said that Cy Young had every dollar he ever made playing baseball. When asked how much he was worth Cy said, "I have made over $100,000 playing baseball, but have spent more than half of it foolishly." George Edward Waddell, leave the room this instant.

With baseball leagues springing up nearly every day fans in Texas and Oklahoma should be well fixed in the national pastime next season. Among the leagues already organized are the Texas, Mid-Continent, Texas-Oklahoma, South Central, Oklahoma State, Texas-Louisiana and Mid-Coast.

COLUMBUS AND J. H. S. ARE ONLY OPPONENTS

Montello Defeated 58 to 7 Last Night and One More Team Remains Between Jamesville and the Meet.

Montello proved no match for the fast Columbus team last night when they met at Portage to decide which team should play Jamesville for the right to go to the Appleton meet, and lost the game, 58 to 7. The three teams were all that remained to try out for this season and now the difference will have to be settled between the Columbus boys and Jamesville. This game will probably be held in Madison some time within the near future. The local lads have made an excellent record so far this year having won every game they have played with outside teams and have got a good start for the pace they will have to take if they win honors in the state championship tournament which comes off within a few weeks.

Watertown is First Team Billed in Race for State Title—Other Teams Watching for Games.

As one of the most successful of the teams in the state, Watertown has been billed for a game here with the Cardinals tonight at the rink. This is the first team which has been put on the board since the Lakotas decided to go out for the State championship and a number of other games will probably soon be arranged. Fond du Lac and Superior both have fast teams which plan to beat the heads if they prove to be in their class and other teams will follow in their wake. The game this evening promises to be one of the best which has been here this year besides the National games and a large crowd is expected as a great many people are taking an interest in the attempt to pick off a state championship.

The Car You Will be Proud to Own

Here is the stylish, roomy Maxwell Mascotte—the first real family car for less than $1000.

Maxwell Mascotte is the ideal "American Family Car"—the car that meets a great popular demand. The Maxwell Mascotte is the ideal car for the particular man of limited income who has long wanted an automobile of sufficient size—stylish appearance—and perfect efficiency—at a price under $1000.

It has been close figuring, but great purchasing power, unequalled manufacturing facilities, and quantity production of the U. S. Motor Co. make it possible. Compare the Maxwell with any other car selling within $200 of its price. In every way it is a car you will be proud to own.

The same Maxwell Reliability, Durability and 100 per cent Efficiency that won such a complete victory in the Glidden Tour are embodied in this Maxwell.

The Mascotte model bristles with new features, all of which add to the comfort and satisfaction of the buyer.

Maxwell Mascotte $980

No contest ever held in this country has furnished such a practical test of automobile efficiency—such a standard for comparison of automobile values—as has the recent Glidden Tour.

Throughout this 1454-mile journey through mud and sand, over swollen streams and storm-swept mountains, the Maxwell team was on time every day, and was the only one to finish with a perfect score. The Maxwell team made a clean sweep—won all the trophies—all the prize money in its class—established 100 per cent efficiency at all times.

Maxwell is the lowest priced car to ever win a Glidden Tour, yet it broke all Glidden records in the hardest Glidden Tour ever run—and defeated $2000, $3000, $4000 and $6000 cars.

The Glidden Tour furnished the most complete proof of the unequalled service a Maxwell car will give you—and shows how the Maxwell has earned the significant title "American Touring Champion."

We've prepared a special booklet on the Maxwell car—and want you to send for it. Read it over—read it aloud to your family; let them decide which car they want and it's safe to assume they'll want the Maxwell Mascotte.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The rich man's son inherits lands
And piles of brick and stone, and gold.
And inherits soft, white hands
And tender flesh that fears the cold.
Nor dares to wear a garment old.
A heritage, it seems to me,
One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

The rich man's son inherits care,
The bank may break, the factory burn,
A breath may burst his bubble hard,
And soft, white hands could hardly earn.
A living that would serve his turn,
A heritage, it seems to me,
One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
Stout muscles and a sinewy heart,
A hardy frame, a hardy spirit;
King of two hands he does his part
In every useful toil and art.
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
Wishes o'erjoyed with humble things,
A rank adjudged by toil-won merit,
Content that from employment springs,
A heart that in his labor sings;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

Both, heirs to some six feet of sod,
Are equal in the earth at last;
Both, children of the same dear God,
Prove title to their heirship vast.
By record of a well-filled past;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Well worth a life to hold in fee.

There are some things which age does not tarnish, and this little tribute to "The Heritage," by James Russell Lowell is one of them. The notion prevails to large extent that the only tangible inheritance is an estate, and the various kinds of property which it may include. This is the only sort of an inheritance that the state and nation recognize by placing it on the tax list.

The average mortal, however, wastes but little time in waiting for dead men's shoes, though occasionally an ambitious woman in the prime of life attaches herself to a derelict for financial purposes.

An all-wise Creator so richly endowed humanity that he who wills may work out his own destiny, and human experience discloses the fact that wealth of every kind, which is accumulated as the result of personal effort, represents the rarest value, because it costs something.

The people of this generation enjoy, by the right of a common inheritance, many of the comforts and luxuries unknown to the forefathers. What the most of us know of pioneer life and its hardships is gleaned from history, yet these early experiences were intensely real to the men and women who passed through them.

A party of land-seekers, driving across the prairie of South Dakota in the spring of 1880, stopped at a sod house for their noon day lunch. A lone dog seemed to be the only occupant, but presently a man appeared, coming from the nearest neighbors, a mule and a half away, and carrying a pail of water, which in those days was a luxury in that alkali region.
His story was briefly told: "My wife is back in God's country and I am trying to make a home for her on this piece of government land. Tough job, but I hope to win." Did he succeed? Not for the years of youth which followed drove him, and thousands of hardy pioneers, from the soil they coveted, and which they attempted to redeem.

Today this same land is worth fifty dollars per acre. Churches and school houses dot the once barren prairie, and towns and villages loom up in all directions, while the railroads which opened up the country and ran at a loss for a dozen years or more, now do a thriving business.

That's one of the inheritances of the new generation. The men who carried the water and endured the hardships have passed on, as well as the men who built the railroads at the expense of energy and capital, inspired by sublime faith in the future. But they left a choice inheritance to the actors on the stage today, who appropriate it with but little sense of appreciation.

Someone said, a time ago, that the man who spends one hundred dollars for a ticket across the continent, enjoys all the comfort and luxury of a service which represents hundreds of millions in capital, and the labor of the best brain that the nation ever produced. No truer statement was ever made, and yet the average "thank you" is a word of complaint.
A little thought and an ordinary imagination will paint a gallery of pictures which tell the story of a common inheritance in the realm of material things, and the investment of a little time, along this line, would prove a good antidote for the unrest, just now so common.

Men, especially men outside the pale of any church, pride themselves on their morality. They like to have it said of them that their word is as good as their note, and this is frequently the case, because morality is the only creed they recognize.
This class of men are inclined to forget that the hands of morality is Christianity, and whatever they may possess in the way of moral character is largely a matter of inheritance. In back in the years of childhood, in the old home, sacred to memory, was a mother who made no great pretensions to goodness, but she was good all the way through. She was ambitious for her boy, not so much that he should acquire wealth or fame, but that he should go out to the great conflict of life equipped with a brave heart and a clean mind, and so she prayed and worked for the boy that he might enjoy this choice inheritance.

Character is not built in a day, neither does it come to full blossom over night, like the morning glory. The strong men of this and every other generation are the product of the old home, however lowly, where the name of God was revered and where the seeds of character were nurtured in congenial soil.
The homes of today are more cultured and more intellectual, but many of them lack the old-time moral fibre, and as a result the churches suffer through indifference, and the legacy bequeathed to the boys and girls, who will be the men and women of tomorrow, is often meager.

The notion prevails to large extent, that the most of us inherit our religious creed and political faith. If the home is without a creed there is nothing to inherit, in the realm of theology, and the nation is so full of political orphans, just now, that a political birthright is of doubtful value.

The storehouses of nature open wide their doors to all enquiring minds, and the man without a dollar absorbs the sunshine, and feasts his eyes on the landscape, which stretches away like a panorama, with the same freedom, and usually with a larger sense of appreciation, than the man who can afford to decorate his home with choice paintings.

Health, the priceless heritage, knows no favorites, but gives an equal start, the man who lives in the open, and takes for his daily bread, enjoys a larger endowment than the man of leisure.

The average man is comparatively poor, so far as this world's goods are concerned, but he is rich in inheritance in all that makes for manhood, and when this wealth is appropriated there is but little cause for complaint.

Bachelors Confined to Skirts.
It was once the custom in Korea that a man was not allowed to attain to the dignity of trousers until he married. The bachelor was forced to wear skirts as one who possessed no definite position in society. Moreover, the law prohibited marriage unless the man was able to support a wife in the station to which she was used, so that the skirt also served as an index of income.

Love of Nature.
Happy are the naive and simple who take life on the good side without cringing for themselves chimerical tortures. How they profit by the sweetness of April without thinking of December. The love of nature is the first and last word of wisdom.

Doing Well.
"How's your boy getting along in the big city?" asked a neighbor. "Fine," replied the farmer. "He gets his name in the papers almost every day now. He's one of them joy riders you read so much about."

To Mothers—And Others.
You can use Bucklen's Arnica Salve to cure children of eczema, rashes, bottom, chafings, scaly and crushed humors, as well as accidental injuries—cuts, burns, bruises, etc., with perfect safety. Nothing else heals so quickly for boils, ulcers, old, running, or fever sores or piles it has no equal. 25 cts. at People's Drug Co.

AT THE MOMENT
WHEN MAGGIE SINGS.
No ordinary voice is hers
Because you see,
The souls of those who listen and her kind of music understand.
There's not another of her kind
That anyone can call to mind.
It's plain to see she has a tone
That's really, truly, all her own.
Not Petrazzini or Calvo
Can ever hope to sing the way
That Maggie does when she is right
For her accustomed vocal flight.
Life loses all its other strings
When Maggie sings.

When Maggie sings "My Beauty," the folks who listen must agree. No one on earth could imitate her technique and that's safe to state. Her audience beneath her awing see other troubles pass away. They float on a mysterious sea. Where they had never thought to be. The universe seems to stand still. A feeling strange just seems to thrill them and a gently message send. That this world is about to end. I always wish it would, by Jingo! When Maggie sings.

HINTS FOR GOOD COOKS.
There is always one sure way to tell when an egg is bad. Roll it softly and then open it with a common egg knife or spoon. If it is bad, you will not be left long in doubt.
A very good substitute for macaroni when company comes unexpectedly is white clothes line. It can be cut up into any lengths desired and boiled until quite tender. Then pour oil on the melted cheese and the tomato sauce and nine out of ten guests who have eaten home cooked macaroni before will not know the difference.
Said dressing can be made of almost anything, but the best imitation of the genuine can be manufactured by taking two teaspoons full of gasoline, a pint of ammonia, three tablespoons of cod liver oil and a tigger of axle grease. It would take an expert to detect the fact that it was an imitation.

Corned beef and cabbage makes a dainty lunch for an afternoon tea. The boiling cabbage gives the house a homelike atmosphere and will prevent the guests from staying too long. Home made brown bread is always a treat. First mix your dough and then mold it into nice round loaves. Your husband's silk hat will make an excellent mold. If he hasn't got a silk hat have him go to a banquet and get one by leaving fifteen minutes ahead of the other guests.

FROM THE HICKORYVILLE CLARION.

Livin' pictures was given at our op'ry house last week by the Ladies Aid.

Hank Purdy and Hod Renfrow posed for "The Rascals," and Hod reached into Hank's back pocket for to get Hank's bottle while they was in a church and Hank soaked Hod on the bungle something desperate. That was the most successful picture of the evening when it got to going good and comtable Ezra Whipple bustled into it just in time to go sailing through the window and out on a sailing bank. That was the last picture of the evening and everybody turned in an d'ro alarm and everybody had to go to bed which was a fizzle and wasn't half as good as the pictures.

Miss Euphemia Perkins, our postess of passion, has won four packages of tobacco for sending in the best poem about "Pride of the Gravel Train" smokin' which will be used for advertisement purposes. Col. Muldo says there ain't nothing like having a talented daughter in the family as he probably won't have to hit the box of free smokin' tobacco down to Miller's store for two or three weeks.

Miss Mudge's prize winning poem was as follows, to wit:

Come all ye smokers, far and near,
Oh, come and see what you can hear.
When other smokin' gives you pain
Just try "Pride of the Gravel Train."

Oh, bring your good old Henry Clay
And light her up and puff away,
It wipes the clouds off from your brain
Does old, "Pride of the Gravel Train."

Old Andy limits is dead you know,
He smoked it ninety years or so,
His smokin' yet with might and main,
But not "Pride of the Gravel Train."

Just save your coupons. They're the stuff
And then, if you live long enough,
You'll get a ten-cent walking cane,
So smoke "Pride of the Gravel Train."

Location of Garden of Eden.
The late General Gordon firmly believed the Coco de Mer to be the forbidden fruit, and the Seychelles Islands to be the site of the Garden of Eden. This idea was so firmly fixed in his mind that he caused soundings to be taken of the surrounding sea, for the purpose of tracing the course of the four rivers, and the results confirmed him in his belief.

GLUCK AND EMPEROR JOSEPH
Composer Harshly Told Austrian Monarch That Archduke Sang His Music Wretchedly.

Gluck, the composer, was not of the sort of men of whom courtiers are made. One day he attended, at the court at Vienna, a concert at which the Emperor Joseph II, and one of his archdukes sang a fragment from one of Gluck's compositions. Naturally enough, the Imperialist glanced at the composer to see how he was impressed by the honor they were doing him. They were shocked to observe that he was making a series of extraordinary and significant grimaces. The emperor stopped and inquired whether he and the archduke were not singing the bit according to Gluck's idea of how it should be done.
"My idea!" exclaimed Gluck. "Why, sire, I am the poorest walker in the world, but I would vastly rather take a walk of six leagues than be forced to hear a composition of my own interpreted in such a way as that."
Joseph II, was brave enough to take no notice of the criticism, but the court were quite convinced that if such a reproach had been addressed to the Cesar Nicholas the composer would have prosecuted the life musical studies from that time forth under the unfavorable surroundings of the Siberian mines.

It was the composer Veigl, a man of very different temperament from Gluck, who, when the Emperor Francis Joseph played the first violin in the performance of one of his overtures, threw himself at the monarch's feet, and exclaimed: "Ah, sire, with your majesty's benighted condescension to grant my prayer, and favor me once more with a most gracious sharp!"

When May We Install a Rock County Telephone In Your House
You'll realize, after the first day, that it is a sort of a mutual benefit proposition; and it's a needful addition to your home. It's the logical phone to install because we reach nearly twice as many subscribers as our competitor from Wall Street, The Great-American-Gobble-It-All-Society, The Bell System. When you have our phone you're secure in the knowledge that you can reach your friends over the line when you want to. Another feature that should cause you to think seriously of installing our phone is the fact that the cost is only $1 per month. When you consider that we have about twice as many subscribers as the other system it is quite natural to infer that you buy twice as much for your money when you install our phone. Monopoly used to charge $3 for what we furnish for $1, and for that $3 could only connect you with 300 other subscribers. We furnish you over 2300 other subscribers for your little old dollar. ## BIG LIST OF CARS ENTERED FOR SHOW AT RINK NEXT WEEK

Twelve Auto Agencies in County Have Already Entered Big Show—Forty Cars Are Expected.

Twelve auto agencies in the county have already entered cars in the big auto show which will be held at the west side rink next week, March 14, 15 and 16. It is possible that there will be several additions to the list but nearly every dealer has already signified his intention to enter the event.

From indications, now there will be at least forty cars on exhibition. These will include seventeen or eighteen different makes, from the low-priced runabouts and touring cars to the high-priced, high-powered automobiles which sell as high as $1,000 and $2,000.

Edw. Amerpohl has charge of the decorations for the affair which will be elaborate and no efforts or expense will be spared to make the building attractive in appearance. Thomas A. Murphy, who has charge of the show, stated today that there was no doubt but that it would be one of the most important events in the history of the motor car trade in this section. The interest in the show will extend throughout the southern section of the state as well as the county and it is most convenient place to study and compare all the makes of cars which are sold in this region.

LATE SPRING WILL OPEN WITH DROUTH

Foster Predicts Rapid Opening of Crop Weather After March 28, However Dry During Spring.

Copyrighted 1912 by W. T. Foster. Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to crop conditions March 10 to 12; warm wave 9 to 13, cool wave 12 to 10. This storm wave temperatures are expected to average about or a little below normal. The storm will be of more than usual force and heaviest rain will occur in parts of the southern states while not much precipitation may be expected east of the Rocklee-hor latitude 40. Rainfall is expected to be greater north and south of latitude 40 east of Rocklee-hor.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about March 15, cross Pacific slope by close of 10, eastern sections 20. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about March 15, great central valleys 17, eastern sections 19. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about March 18, great central valleys 20, eastern sections 22.

Not an Early Spring. The general average of storm wave temperatures is expected to go down from the five days centering on March 5 to the five days centering on March 10 and the last above described storm wave to average colder than usual. This does not portend an early opening of spring crop weather for the sections lying south of parallel 40.

JANESVILLE CATTLE BRING TOP PRICES

Emery Dunbar of Footville Sold Two Cows Purchased of Walter Little for $7 Per Cwt. in Chicago.

Two cows, fed and prepared for market on the Walter Little farm in the town of Janesville, west of this city, which were sold to Emery Dunbar of Footville, for delivery on the Chicago market, brought the highest price ever paid for cows on the open market in Chicago. The cows averaged 1,575 pounds each and were sold at $7 per cwt. The Insurer's Journal speaks as follows in regard to the sale:

"Emery Dunbar of Janesville, Wisconsin, is today shouting the praises of Rappal Brothers and Co., who sold his two cows averaging 1,575 pounds at $7 per cwt. which, to the best of our knowledge, is the highest price ever paid for cows on the open market in Chicago. It is a record of which we have every reason to be proud. Rappal Brothers and Co. is not a house of a single sale, however, as our John E. Quinn who sells our cows and heifers, also sold today 45 light heifers averaging only 602 lbs. at $6 and two cows averaging 1,000 pounds at $5.50. These two light cows at $5.50 considering their light weight are as high as the two heavy cows at $7."

"There are few cows which sold above $6.00. Two cows prime 1,575 pounds as today as seen on the market in months past, went at seven dollars but such kind are so few and far between as to excite some curiosity to go by."

CONNOR & CO. GIVE UP BUSINESS TODAY

Stock Exchange Company Ends Its Career After a Year's Liquidation During Illness of Head.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) New York, March 3.—The stock exchange firm of Connor and company announced their suspension on the stock exchange at noon. Connor and company had been in the process of liquidation for more than a year, due to the protracted illness of E. S. Connor, the senior member. According to a statement the firm's liability will be about $3,500,000 with approximately "sufficient assets to cover them."

"These figures will be diminished," the statement reads, "as W. E. Connor, the principal creditor, will take over many of the liabilities, and he has also directed that his own claims be deferred, thus making it certain that all others will be paid in full. The assignment is made without preference."

Keeping Young and Well. Here is a receipt for keeping young and well: Find an occupation and love it with all your heart. Think kindly of and not justly toward those by whom you are surrounded. This receipt, if followed, will insure a good disposition, sound health, and never fails to make a woman of forty-five look and feel fifteen years younger.

Equality of the Sexes. Traveling in the country, I observe with indignation that the same work in every field is represented as a man! The flapping of a woman's skirt, the waving of her feathers, would assuredly be as effective for the purpose as the dangling of a coat! We will eventually displace a man to every field.—London Truth.

Diseases Mastered By Chiropractic. The Cause of Disease is Simple—Removing the Cause Equally Simple.

Chiropractic might be likened to electricity in its workings. Turn a switch and the room is flooded with light. The chiropractor adjusts the subluxated vertebrae (note illustration, B is subluxated, A after adjustment the diseased organ is flooded with life. Chiropractic adjustments abolish disease as electricity abolishes darkness. Here's another instance of what we've done:

To Whom It May Concern: I am 50 years of age and for the past twelve years have been a constant sufferer from Nervousness, Constipation and Stomach Trouble.

During the time of my illness I have treated with a great number of prominent physicians, have dosed with drugs, patent medicines, etc. From time to time I would get a little temporary relief but every experience made me feel less and less hopeful of ever getting my health back. In the early part of last spring I was laid up for several weeks and unable to work. I had read and heard from others what The Chiropractors were doing but was skeptical about their claims being fulfilled. As a last resort, I concluded to give them a trial. The result of this decision has been what I have so long sought, a LAST-RESORT. In less than a week after I submitted to the Chiropractic adjustments I was able to work and in three weeks time was enjoying better health than for 12 years. I cannot too strongly recommend the Chiropractors and the wonderful curative value of the Chiropractic Science.

THREE ASTONISHING PRICES

IMPERIAL CARS

SIX BIG FEATURES

Four Real Doors, Center Control, Silent Enclosed Power Plant, Long Stroke Motors, Demountable Rims, Big Tires, Long Wheelbase.

Everything that is best in modern automobile construction is incorporated in IMPERIAL Cars for 1912. Almost every make of car boasts of some of these—Imperial Cars have them all.

Specifications are not everything, yet point for point every Imperial model is the head of its class when actual value is set beside price. Measure them up. We challenge comparison.

Style and graceful lines are not everything—speed and power are not everything—comfort and easy riding qualities alone do not make a car, yet you will find no more handsome design, no greater motor efficiency, no more luxurious upholstery and big room bodies in cars costing one-third more than you will find in Imperial cars at these astonishing prices.

Behind this sterling worth, as judged by figures, lie the actual accomplishments and the wonderful victories of the Imperial cars in endurance contests. These public tests have time and again proved the Imperial the best for reliability and dependability, when compared with a score of other cars—some costing three times as much. Five first-awards in the past five months have strengthened the record of the Imperial as the car for use—for wear—the car for economical investment.

MODEL 44, $1750. This 40-horse power car has the famous Imperial 4-cylinder, unit power plant, 4½x5¼, long stroke, valves enclosed, 120 inch wheel base; tires 36x4; demountable rims; complete equipment, including Prest-O-Lite tank and lamp, silk mohair top, speedometer and windshield.

MODEL 34, $1400. Imperial unit power plant, completely enclosed, with 4 5-16x5¼ inch motor, valves enclosed. Wheelbase, 116 inches; tires 34x3½; demountable rims; complete equipment, including Prest-O-Lite gas tank, silk mohair top, speedometer and windshield.

MODEL 32, $1250. Imperial unit power plant, completely enclosed with 4 5-16x5¼ motor, valves enclosed. Wheelbase 116 inches; tires 34x3½; demountable rims, equipment includes generator, gas lamps, tools and horn.

THE IMPERIAL ROADSTER. Model 33, $1250, built on the same chassis as our model 32, but complete equipment—Prest-O-Lite gas tank and lamps, silk mohair top, speedometer and windshield.

Don't think of buying a light delivery car until you have seen the "Dart," $650.

Both the "Dart" and "Imperial" models will be shown at The Rock County Auto Show at The Rink, March 14, 15, 16th.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Evansville, March 8.—Clarence Mapes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Mapes, arrived at his home in Magnolia, Thursday, after an absence of four years. Mr. Mapes left home when he was sixteen years of age, and very soon afterwards entered the United States Navy and has continued in the service up to the present time.

Since entering the navy Mr. Mapes has traveled entirely around the world, starting from Magnolia he traveled to the Atlantic coast, sailing from there on the famous flagship, Connecticut, with the great war fleet on their long journey to the various important harbors of the world and returning to the Pacific coast, from thence he came to his home in Magnolia.

Among the many thrilling experiences of his four years in the service of his country, Mr. Mapes counts the terrible earthquake in Italy as not the least. The war fleet was in Italian waters when that dreadful disaster occurred.

Mr. Mapes was born in the town of Magnolia, Rock county, March 6, 1892, and was twenty years old last Wednesday. Plain Speech Should Survive.
It is the speech of the plain people that we would preserve. The early settlers were not given to much talking, and their vocabulary was small, but they never failed to express themselves so that their meaning was perfectly clear. In the mountain country of the south they preserve to this day many of the ancient idioms, and use words which the most native of our lexicographers have not caught.—Exchange.

A Great Trick.
"What are those funny looking things on the front of the machine?" "Ah," said the dealer, with enthusiasm, "I was wanting you to notice those. This is our latest death preventer. As I told you, our car is warranted not to strike a tree, telephone pole or lamp post. The moment the car comes in contact with anything of the sort it immediately begins to climb."

All Necessities Supplied.
As you grow ready for it, somewhere or other you will find what is needful for you in a book.—George MacDonald.

The Car That Marks My Limit

By R. E. Olds, Designer

I have no quarrel with men who ask more for their cars—none with men who ask less. I have only to say that, after 25 years—after creating 25 models and building tens of thousands of cars—here's the best I know. I call it My Farewell Car.

I claim for this car no great innovation. The time is past for that.

Thousands of good men, for two decades, have worked at perfecting cars. No man can ever go much further than the best these men have done.

I believe that, Reo the Fifth, in every feature, shows the utmost these men have accomplished. It represents, in addition, the best I have learned through 25 years of continuous striving. So it comes, I believe, pretty close to finality.

It shows what can be done by modern facilities, by boundless experience, by honesty of purpose, by the genius for taking pains. And that is all that any car at any price can offer.

The Lessons of 25 Years
Where this car excels lies in what I have learned in 25 years of car building.

I've been learning longer than others. I have learned faster than others, because I had more cars out.

That's my chief advantage. What some think right, I know to be wrong. What some think sufficient, I know to be reckless.

Myriads of cars used by myriads of owners have taught me every possible weakness. They have shown the need for big margins of safety, for exactness, for careful inspection, for laboratory tests.

I Go To Extremes
For every part I know the best steel alloy. To make sure that I get it, I analyze all my steel.

I built a crushing machine of 50 tons' capacity just to test my gears.

My axles have twice the needed strength. My bearings are Timken Roller and Hyatt High Duty.

My carburetor is doubly heated, and adapted to low-grade gasoline. That makes the commonest troubles impossible.

I carry tests and inspections, throughout the construction, to what men call extremes. Those 25 years taught me the need for precautions.

They also have taught me that men love beautiful cars. My bodies are finished with 17 coats. My lamps are enameled—my engine nickel-trimmed.

The upholstery is deep, and of hair-filled genuine leather. The wheel base is long, the wheels are large, the car is overfired. I avoid all the petty economies.

New Center Control
The gear shifting is done by that center "cone handle." It moves only three inches in each of four directions to change to every speed and reverse.

There are no side levers. Both of the brakes, also the clutch, are operated by the foot pedals. The doors are free from obstructions.

The driver may sit—as he should sit—on the left hand side, close to the cars which he passes. With the old lever controls this was impossible, save in electric cars.

Price, $1,055 the Only Satisfaction

My greatest achievement, in my estimation, is the price on this new car. No other car begins to compete with it.

This is due to automatic machinery — to enormous production — to making all parts in one factory. It is due to building only one chassis in all this great plant. It is due to small selling cost, and to a very small profit.

But this price is not fixed.

This initial price of $1,055 is the minimum. It is based on today's low cost for materials. It is figured on a doubled output, due to this new creation.

If costs advance our price must advance. But we shall keep it this low just as long as is possible. That is better, we think, than fixing the price for six months in advance, and leaving big margins to do it.

My Supreme Effort.
Reo the Fifth marks my limit. Better materials are impossible, better workmanship out of the question. Better features or devices, if they exist, are still unknown to me.

More care or skill or quality is beyond my capability. At twice the price I could build no better car. If others can, they are better men than I.

Ask for Catalog.
Ask for our catalog, showing the various bodies and stating all the facts. We will tell you then where to see the car.

Reo the Fifth, my finest creation, will interest every motor car lover. Ask for the book today. Address Terrible Temptation.

"Of course," said the man who was looking out of the window at the heavy snowfall, "I don't believe George Washington was capable of telling a lie. But I don't consider that cherry tree incident much of a test."
"Could you devise a better one?"
"Yes. I'd like to know what Washington would have said if he had stood at the door of a restaurant on a stormy night and the waiter had hurried up to him with a fine new silk umbrella with an ivory handle and no name on it, and said: 'Isn't this yours, sir?'"

SUBSTANTIALLY TRUE.

Local pride is strong in almost every breast. This anecdote shows how it may be satisfied without actually overstepping the bounds of truth.

"You see, this mountain," the jaunty car driver exclaimed. "The tourist admitted that he did see them. 'This is the highest mountain in Ireland.'"

"You don't say so?" the tourist said. "Oh, sir, indeed! Ah! you see this mountain," the driver went on, flicking the whip toward another range, "this is the highest in the world!"

The tourist expressed his incredulity. "Surely not!" he protested. "Sure, it's true," the driver retorted, bridling, "excepting, of course, for them in furria parte."—Answers.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

THE CHURCH CHOIR.

By Howard L. Rann.

The church choir is a collection of song birds who rise up and sing just when everybody is perfectly satisfied with the way things are going. Some people enjoy choir music, while others put up with it in order to retain their standing in the church. Many a man is kept away from divine worship by the harrowing fear that the choir will bob up and sing a 16-mezzo to him before he can make a successful getaway.

The choir list is always filled with peace and love and several patterns of picture hats. Every choir has four self-proclaimed soloists who take care to pronounce their words so that no body can tell whether they have gotten off to a bad start or are rounding into the home stretch. The quartet choir is an institution which makes the finance committee as short of breath as the winner of the fat men's race. The old-fashioned choir, which was led by a high-pitched precentor with a tuning fork and a cold in the head, has become little more than a gloomy reminiscence. It is not considered this thing in fashionable churches nowadays to line the hymns, as the choir attends to that, usually lining them with nine different qualities of tone production. The choir is aided and abetted in its nefarious undertaking by a pipe organ which is subject to fainting spells and is liable to lie down in the middle of the offertory and leave the soprano soloist hanging onto a high A-flat by her eyelids. The pipe organ is played with the hands and feet, and the organist who cannot run up and down the pedal board with the grace and agility of a St. Bernard dog with the St. Vitus dance is considered a joke in choir circles. A determined choir, which is always coming in when a man is trying to make up a little late sleep, is a blessing which causes mingled feelings of joy and pain to permeate the pews.

W. H. Allen, president of Girard college, has been chosen president of the American Bible Society, which has appropriated $50,000 for Bible works in foreign lands for the ensuing year.

This number of the Gazette begins its sixteenth volume.

The members of the Jackson street church who were recently lectured on "sidewalk manners" by a newspaper published in this city are firm in their belief that the author of the discourse ought to remove about two feet of snow from his own sidewalk.

Those interested will take notice that the cultivated ground and track of the agricultural society will be rented to the highest bidder on Monday next at the rooms in the court house.

On Thursday morning at seven o'clock the snow storm of which we had been warned by the signal department, reached us and for forty hours continued without abatement. Some fifteen inches of snow have fallen which the high winds of yesterday have driven into impassable drifts, blocking the road outside the city and making travel on our business streets extremely difficult. Trains were blocked and came into the station hours late, many being delayed by blocked freights.

"Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live." This startling statement was made by William Green, Malachite, Colo.

"They told me I would die with consumption. It was up to me then to try the best lung medicine and I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery. It was well I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has cheated the grave of another victim." The time approaches, Mr. Man, when you will take the sprinkling can, rake and spade and hoe, and blow yourself for sacks of seeds which will produce all kinds of weeds when they begin to grow. It is a strange, noteworthy thing, that with the coming of the spring, man yearns to delve the ground, to labor with the fragrant soil as Father Adam used to till, to fuss and potter round. He dreams of finer chubbier heads and enigmatical and onion bodies than ever man has seen; and he will take the finest saw and sawestash, both balled and raw, that ever wore the green. Experience might teach him that his visions will be broken forth, his garden be a lake, that all the harvest he will get will be a rippling rill of sweat, and fifty kinds of ache. But man forgets his former woes when Gentle Annie comes and blows upon her fairy pipe; once more the luscious soil he digs and plants again his thimblejigs, his cauliflower and ripe. We've civilized the human race until there scarcely is a trace of old primal man, save when the

"THE SERVANT IN THE HOUSE."

"There's a lot of brothers knocking about the world as we don't know of." This striking sentence spoken by the Drain-Man in the second act of "The Servant in the House" furnishes the keynote of the entire play, which comes to the Myers Theatre on Tuesday, March 12. The play, which has been acclaimed from coast to coast as one of the greatest plays in all the wide range of English drama, and as a lasting contribution to the English literature, is built on the idea of universal brotherhood and it teaches with compelling force the lesson that man's highest happiness comes from unselfish service to others.

The central figure in the play is a quiet, impressive man, garbed in long, flowing oriental robes, who has taken a place as butler in the home of an English clergyman, and who wields a strange, uncanny influence over every one with whom he is brought in contact.

It must not be imagined that "The Servant in the House" is a dry preaching, a dramatized sermon, or a prosy succession of platitudinous speeches. It is a drama that throbs with life, that is instinct with power and dramatic force. And it is acted by one of the most remarkable companies recently seen on the American stage, a company which includes among its members no less than three former stars and is headed by the most popular of younger American players, Hugo B. Koch.

"THE SPRING MAID."

After its reputation for melodious charm had extended over all Europe and it was being sung in every music loving city of the continent with a record of two years' stay in Berlin, a year in Vienna and a year in St. Petersburg, "The Spring Maid" of the operetta as for the power to impersonate the sprightly characters. "The Spring Maid" will come to Myers Theatre Tuesday, March 19.

THRILLING EXPERIENCES.

"Because the moving picture photographer is constantly going from one part of the world to another, and seeing life in so many phases and climates, he is subject constantly to more difficulties and dangers than the most adventurous 'soldiers of fortune,'" says the manager for Lyman H. Howe's "Travel Festival" which comes to the Myers Theatre, March 24 and 25, matinee 27, with an entirely new program.

"To our staff photographers travel is not the 'festival' that it is to our audience. The most interesting or successful pictures, as a rule, are obtained only from the most perilous positions. One day our photographers are climbing a precipitous peak. The next they are getting a head-on picture of a steepchase race or a cavalry charge. Then again they are on the brink of a volcanic crater. Or they share with the hunter the dangers of the African jungle, even taking chances that no hunter would take. Sometimes they must cross raging torrents on slender cable bridges, brave a high sea in a tiny boat or crawl to the loftiest glider of a low sky-scraper. Like explorers, they must suffer privation, heat, cold, and hunger in order to show the public such scenes as Mr. Howe presents."

"More thrills are often experienced by those who follow a moving picture than the picture itself conveys," continued Mr. Howe's manager. "Some of these are not of the pleasant kind either. When a man with a cumbersome load—a tripod or camera—must climb an almost perpendicular cliff where a single misstep means death, he experiences a thrill that is none too pleasant. When an enraged rhinoceros charges directly at one with nothing but a camera as a means of defense, or when a fragment of a projectile striking armor plate only fifty feet away carries off your hat, the sensation is more than peculiar. Yet such and many similar perils are faced constantly by our photographers. Nevertheless the oftener they flirt with death the more fearless they become. The many dangers they have passed through seem to imbue them with a feeling of invulnerability."

BILL NYE'S "LIFE OF SHAKESPEARE."

Now that Southern and Marlowe have arranged to appear here in Shakespearean repertoire, it is a propitious time to reproduce Bill Nye's famous "Life of Shakespeare." It was as follows:

"I do not undertake to stand up for the personal character of Shakespeare, but I say that he wrote good pieces, and I don't care who knows it. It is doubtless true that at the age of eighteen he married a woman eight years his senior and that children began to cluster about their hearthstone in a way that would have made a man in a New York flat commit suicide. Three little children within fourteen months, including twins, came to the humble home of the great bard, and he began to go out and climb upon the highway to do his 'writing.' Sometimes he would stay away from home for two or three weeks at a time, fearing that when he entered the house some one would tell him that he was within a parent."

"Yet William Shakespeare, know all the time that he was a great man and that some day he would write pieces to speak. He left Stratford at the age of twenty-one and went to London, where he attracted very little attention, for he belonged to the Yeomanry, being a kind of dramatic Horatio Greenley, both in the matter of clothes and pennance. Thus it would seem that while Sir Francis Bacon was attending a business college and getting himself familiar with the whole-arm movement so as to be able to write a free, cryptogram hand, poor W. Shakespeare was slowly thinking the hair off his head, while ever and anon he would bring out his writing materials and his bright ready tongue, and write a sonnet on an empty stomach."

AH!!!

The dispenser had just mixed a drink, which, to put it mildly—really, without the slightest desire to exaggerate or to color the facts, in the slightest—was a lulu. He who received it took one long draught, smacked his lips, rolled his eyes toward the etherial regions. Then he remarked, in a hushed voice: "Say, fellows, that's a drink fit for an ace!"

One Should Be Enough.

A scientist declares that the brain presents unanswerable problems. Not the least of these is the question why any man wants to be a bigamist. —Cleveland Leader.

Emerson's Advice to Writers.

If you learn to write, 'tis in the street you must learn. You must frequent the public square. There you must defend your every view and attitude. The people and not the college is the writer's home. Keep in touch with your fellow man.—Emerson.

To Cleanse Brushes.

To clean hair brushes put a table spoonful of ammonia into a basin of tepid water and dip the brushes up and down in it until they are clean. Dry with the bristles down and they will be like new.

His Sea-Legs Still On.

"Eddie, you may read," said his teacher. And Eddie read in a high pitched voice: "When Columbus discovered America, he kneeled on the ground and gave thanks to God." "Woman's Home Companion."

Mean Trick.

A Mississippi man believed to be dead woke up and admired the flowers his friends had sent him. Some of them probably felt like sending him the bills.

In Humanity's Concert.

The one thing you have to do is to make a clearvoiced little instrument of yourself, which other people can depend upon entirely for the note wanted.—Huckin.

Wyoming Boosting Good Roads.

Douglas, Wyo., March 8.—In response to a call issued by Governor Carey a Good Roads Convention met here today with delegates in attendance from many points in Wyoming. The convention discussed plans for improved highways throughout the State, with especial reference to the project for a Yellowstone Park Highway, the construction of which was authorized by the last legislature.

C. A. Glossner, 24 Ontario St., Rochester, N. Y., has recovered from a long and severe attack of kidney trouble, his cure being due to Foley's Kidney Pills. After detailing his case, he says: "I am sorry I did not learn sooner of Foley's Kidney Pills. In a few days' time my backache completely left me and I felt greatly improved. My kidneys became stronger, dizzy spells left me and I was no longer annoyed at night. I feel 100 per cent better since using Foley's Kidney Pills." Tonic in action, quick in results. Ford Model T Cars will be exhibited at The Rock County Auto Show at The Rink March 14, 15, 16.

Facts From Ford

There is Nothing Commonplace About FORD MODEL T MOTOR CARS Except Their All Around Usefulness and the Way They Fulfill the Wants of the People

ONE does not buy a motor car every day, hence the wisdom of thoroughly investigating and comparing the merits of the many different makes of motor cars before buying. Most motor cars are made to sell; FORD MODEL T CARS are made to serve, and come to the purchaser with "high priced quality in a low priced car."

Ford Model T cars are standard in all that the word implies. Nine years of service over all kinds of roads and under all weather conditions, and so successful, so satisfactory to users that there are today over 100,000 Ford cars in use the world over.

How much better to invest in a Ford Model T car that you know has been successfully tried and tested. Now you don't want to pay for experiment; you want to buy a car that has proven itself. Buy a Ford Model T and you will not be disappointed.

Ford Model T will save you money on tires, one set running from 5,000 to 8,000 miles.

Ford Model T cars will save you money in gasoline because they go from 20 to 25 miles on one gallon of gasoline.

Ford Model T cars have all the speed you want. No trouble to cover 40 to 45 miles per hour.

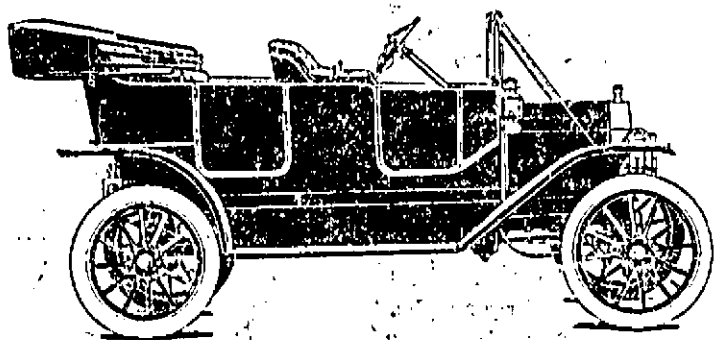

Ford Model T cars have been tested on good roads and bad roads, city streets, country mud, sand, snow and slush, but you never heard of one failing to meet expectations.

Ford Model T cars are quickly understood because of their extreme simplicity of design and the thorough method of construction. They are built to run without bother, and they do it.

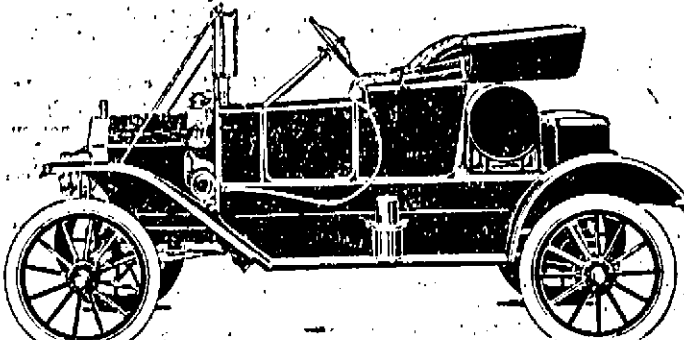

Ford Model T cars have the left drive. See the convenience of this! You are always on the right side of the street when you stop. Your passengers are not obliged to walk around the car to the sidewalk and when entering they step right from the curb into the machine. When you are passing another car you can see clearly and liability of accident is avoided.

Ford Model T is an ideal car for city use, because of its easy and positive control. When the streets are congested you can send the Ford through slowly without stopping; you can turn, wind and almost twist with positive confidence that the car will always respond without taking your hands from the wheel. Investigate this feature and you will find that no other car can give you the same simplicity, safety and ease of control.

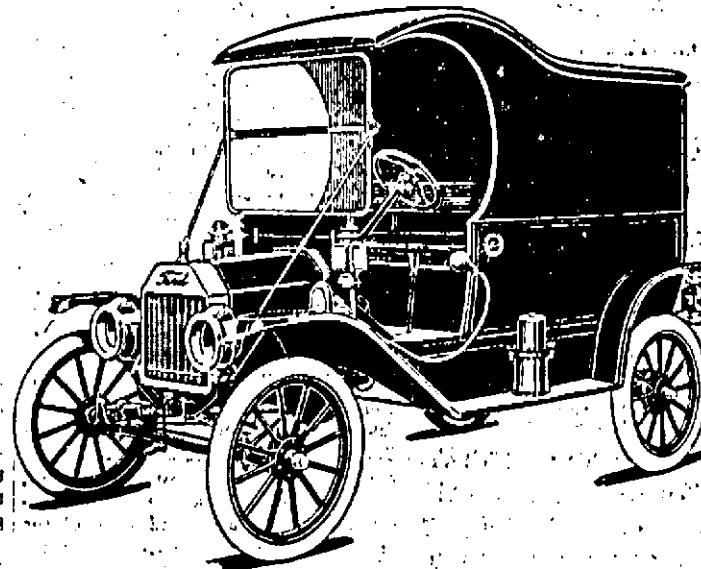

Ford Model T the car without extras—we press on this and we press on the price. There is nothing uncertain; when you buy a Ford you get a completely equipped car and you get a perfectly built car. You get all possible value at the lowest possible price. The price you pay us is made possible only by the magnitude of Ford Manufacturing facilities and the magnitude of Ford output. 20,000 Ford Cars were sold in 1910, 30,000 more were made in 1911 and that much more will be produced in 1912.

Ford Model T Touring Car, 5 passengers, completely equipped, $600.

Ford Model T Torpedo, 2-passenger completely equipped, $500.

Ford Model T Delivery Car, full equipped, $700.

was brought to this country an assured success. The best possible proof the saucy love tale has lost nothing if its pliancy in the translation into English is that black New York theatre goers demanded a second year of it and its many tuneful melodies in the metropolis, and that every large city of America has asked its return engagement, once it has heard. Criticisms have even asserted the American adaptation by Harry B. and Robert Smith has brought a new sparkle to the quaint and unusual story.

An added fascination is given to "The Spring Maid" by the brilliant and well balanced organization that Verba and Laescher, the producers have gathered and the even extravagant offering of scenic and costume display.

A great singing organization of nearly one hundred people with the unusual addition of an orchestra of thirty musicians will be in the support of the saucy songstress, Dorothy Maynard, and the pliant mischievousness in the role of Princess Bonanza finds a merry tolling in the methods of the French Opera House School in which she received her training. Many well known players have been included. George Leon Moore plays the dashing Hungarian Prince, Dimitrie Sushy Wilke the real fountain girl who counts her conquests by the score, Charles McNaughton, whose five years as the principal comedian for the English forces of George Edwards is guarantee of his laughter-compelling powers, has the role of a strolling English tragedian that probably no American player could impersonate so well, and Tillie Sallinger, H. ## DOUBLY PROVEN

Janesville Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

Told of quick relief—of lasting benefit.

The facts are now confirmed. Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, 118 Terrace St., Janesville, Wis., says: "I was a sufferer from kidney trouble for ten or twelve years. My kidneys became atrophied and their failure to do their work properly caused me to become weak and helpless. The kidney secretions were very unnatural and often my joints were sore and swollen. I had almost given up hope of getting relief when I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a supply at the People's Drug Co., and they soon restored my kidneys to a normal condition. I advise other kidney sufferers to try this remedy." (Statement given in August, 1908.)

CONFIRMED PROOF.
Mrs. Johnson was interviewed on September 23, 1910, and she added to the above: "I take pleasure in again recommending Doan's Kidney Pills and advising their use in all cases of kidney trouble. I am still free from kidney complaint and my back does not bother me to any extent."

THE WAY OF A MAN

By EMERSON HOUGH

Copyright, 1907, by the Outing Publishing Company

Kitty laughed a merry peal. "There were twelve red hearts," she said.

"Some day I shall take away your mask and your heart."

"All there and all offered to any who might take them. Silly, silly! Now, I wonder if indeed you did meet Ellen. Come, I'll introduce you to a hundred more, the nicest girls you ever saw."

The scene had lost interest to me. The lights had faded; the music was less sweet. I strolled over to No. 10 and got Johnson to show me my little room. I did not see Grace Sherman in my dreams. Clearly I had reasoned it out as I lay awake that if I had seen Ellen once then indeed it were best for me I should never see Ellen again.

CHAPTER VI.

The Supreme Court.

If remorse, mental or physical, affected any of the dwellers at Jefferson barracks on the morning following the officers' ball neither was in evidence. The next little event of interest was the pigeon match between Orme and myself, which swift rumor seemed to have magnified into an importance not wholly welcome to myself. We had a late breakfast at No. 10, and Stevenson, who was to handle me in the match, saw to it that I had a hard tubbing before breakfast and a good run afterward and later a hearty luncheon with no heavy wines. I was surprised at these businesslike proceedings, which were all new to me, and I reflected with no satisfaction that my hotbeddedness in accepting Orme's challenge might result in no glory to myself and worse than that, let in my friends for loss, for Stevenson informed me that in spite of the fact that I had never shot in a race a number of wagers were backing me against the Englishman. I reasoned, however, that these responsibilities should not be considered by one who needed perfect command of himself. Moreover, although I had never shot at trapped birds, I reasoned that a bird in the air was a flying bird after all, whether from trap or tree. Then, again, I was offended at Orme's air of superiority. Lastly, though it might be the fault of the Cowles' blood to accept any sort of challenge, it was not our way to regret that so soon as the day following.

The grounds for the match had been arranged at the usual place, near to the edge of the military reservation, and here a half hour before the time set there began to gather practically all of the young officers who could get leave, with cooks, strikers, laundresses and other scattered personnel of the barracks. There came as well many civilians from the city, and I was surprised to see a line of carriages with many ladies drawn up back of the scene. Evidently our little matter was to be made a semi-fashionable affair.

Orme shook hands with me and declared he was feeling well, although Major Williams laughingly announced that he had not been able to make his man go to bed for more than an hour that morning or to keep him from eating and drinking everything he could lay his hands upon. Yet now his eye was bright, his skin dry, his step light and easy.

"What boundary do we use, gentlemen?" Orme asked as he looked out over the field. This question showed his acquaintance, but none the less his confidence and his courage as well, for in closely made matches all details are carefully weighed before the issue is joined.

"Our races here have usually been shot at fifty yards bounds," said Stevenson.

"As you like," said Orme. "If that pleases Mr. Cowles."

"Perfectly," said I.

Orme stepped over to the coops where the birds were kept, splendid, iridescent creatures, with long tails, clean, gummy heads and all the colors of the rainbow on their breasts. "By Jove," he said, "they're rippers for looks, and they should fly a bit, I'm thinking. I have never seen them before, much less shot a race at them."

"Still your advantage," said I, laughing. "for I never shot a race at any sort in my life."

"And yet you match against me? My dear fellow, I hardly like it."

"The match is made, Captain Orme, and I am sure Mr. Cowles would not ask for any readjustment," commented Stevenson stiffly.

"Don't understand me to wish to urge anything," said Orme. "I only wish it so we shall all have a chance at revenge. Is there any one who wishes to back me perhaps or to back Mr. Cowles? Sometimes in England we shoot at a guinea a bird or five or ten."

"Stevenson shook his head. "Too galloped for me at this time of the month," he said, "but I'll lay you $100 on the issue."

"Five, if you like, on the Virginian, sir," said young Belknap of the Ninth to Orme.

"Done and done, gentlemen. Let it be dollars and not guineas, if you like."

A few more wagers were laid, and the civilian element began to plunge a bit on Orme, word having passed that he was an old hand at the game, whereas I was but a novice. Orme took some of these wagers carelessly.

"Now as to our referee, captain," said Stevenson. "You are, as you say, something of a stranger among us, and we wish your acquaintance were greater, so that you might name some one who would suit you."

"I'm indifferent," said Orme politely. "Any one Mr. Cowles may name will please me."

His conduct was handsome throughout, and his sporting attitude made him many friends among us. I suspect some army money went on him quietly, although little betting was now done in our presence.

"I see Judge Reeves of the supreme court of the state over there in a carriage," suggested Major Williams. "I've very much a notion to go and ask him to act as our referee."

"God bless my soul," said Orme, "this is an extraordinary country! What a judge of the supreme court! Williams laughed. "You don't know Judge Reeves. He's a trifle old, but game as a fighting cock, and not to mention a few duels in his time, he knows more even about guns and dogs today than he does about law. He'll not be offended if I ask him, and here goes."

He edged off through the crowd, and we saw him engaged in earnest conversation with the judge. To our surprise and amusement, we observed the judge climb hastily down out of his carriage and take Major Williams' arm.

Judge Reeves was a tall, thin man, whose long hair and beard were silvery white, yet his stature was erect and vigorous. It was always said of him that he was the most dignified man in the state of Missouri and that he carried this formality into every detail of his daily life. The story ran that each night, when he and his aged consort retired, they stood, each with candle in hand, on either side of the great bed which all their married life they had occupied in harmony. She, formally bowing to him across the bed, said, "Good night, Judge Reeves."

whereat he, bowing with yet greater formality, replied, "Good night, Mrs. Reeves." Each then blew out the candle and so retired. I cannot touch as to the truth of this story or of the further report that they carried out their ceremony when seating themselves at table each meal of the day, but I will say that the appearance of this gentleman would have given such stories little heed.

We uncovered as the judge approached us, and he shook hands with us in the most solemn way, his own wide black hat in his hand. "A-a-hem, gentlemen," he said, "a somewhat unusual situation for one on the bench—most unusual, I may say. But the court can see no harm in it since no law of the land is violated. Neither does the court hold it beneath the dignity of its office to witness this little trial of skill between gentlemen. Further speaking, the court does not here pass upon questions of law, but sits rather as jury in matters of ocular evidence, with the simple duty of determining whether certain flying objects fall upon this or the other side of that certain line marked out as the boundaries. Gentlemen, I am—ahem—yours with great pleasure." If there was a twinkle in his eye it was a very solemn one.

My weapon was supplied me by Captain Stevenson, a good Manton, somewhat battered up from much use, but of excellent even pattern. Orme shot a Pope model pump of London with the customary "stutter" and slight drop of the English makes.

"Shall the thing be with the single barrel or with both barrels?" inquired our referee. In those days many American matches were shot from plunger traps and with the single barrel.

"I'm more used to the use of both barrels," suggested Orme, "but I do not insist."

"It is the same to me," I said. "So finally we decided that the race should be on twenty-eight yards, the use of both barrels allowed, and the boundary at fifty yards—such rules as came to be later more generally accepted in this country."

"Now, then, gentlemen," said Judge Reeves, "the court is informed that this match is to be for the sum of $2,500, wagered by Captain Orme against a certain black stallion horse, the same not introduced in evidence, but stated by Mr. Cowles to be of the value of $2,500 in the open market."

"Ahem, gentlemen," he resumed, "the court being, as it were, broke, will some one be so good as to lend the court a silver coin? Thank you" (to Williams). "And now, gentlemen, will you toss for the order of precedence?"

We threw the coin, and I lost the toss. Orme sent me to the score first with the purpose, as I knew, of studying his man.

I was perhaps a bit too tense and eager. Our birds were to be flown by hand from behind a screen, and my first bird started off a trifle low, but fast, and I knew I was not on, with the first barrel, the bang of Stevenson's gun being not quite the same as my own. I killed it with the second, but it struggled over the tape.

"Lost bird!" called out Judge Reeves sharply.

Under the etiquette of the game no comment was made on my mishap, and my second, Stevenson, did not make the mistake of commiserating me. No one spoke a word as Orme stepped to the score. He killed his bird as clean as though he had done nothing else all his life. I was a trifle angry with myself by this time, but it only left me well keyed. My bird fell dead inside of Orme's.

"We shot along for ten birds, and Orme was straight to my bird killed."

Whatever the cause, I was by this time perfectly calm. I knew I could shoot to the top of my skill, and if I were beaten it would be through no fault of my own nerves and muscles.

Orme went on as though he could kill a hundred straight. He shot errorlessly, but with absolute confidence, and more than half the time he did not use his second barrel. He made it twenty straight before he came back. Then he caught a strong right quarterer, which escaped altogether, apparently very lightly hit. No one spoke a word of sympathy or exultation. Orme seemed not in the least disturbed.

We were now tied, but luck ran against us both for a time, since out of the next five I missed three and Orme two, and the odds again were against me. It stood the same at thirty and at thirty-five. At forty the fortune of war once more favored me, for, although Orme shot like a machine, with a grace and beauty of delivery I have never seen surpassed, he lost one bird alone dead over the line, carried out by a blast of the rising wind, which blew from left to right across the field. Five birds farther on, yet another struggled over for him, and at sixty-five I had him back of me two birds.

The interest all along the line was now intense. Stevenson later told me that they had never seen such shooting as we were doing.

The heap of dead birds, some of them still fluttering in their last gasps, now grew larger at the side of the referee, and the negro boys were perhaps less careful to wring the necks of the birds as they gathered them. Occasionally a bird was tossed in such a way as to leave a fluttering wing. My seventeen-hundred was such, and it came straight and swift as an arrow, swooping down and curving about with the great speed of those birds when fairly on the wing. I covered it, lost sight of it, then suddenly realized that I must fire quickly if I was to reach it before it crossed the score. It was so close when I fired that the charge cut away the quills of a wing. It fell just inside the line with its head up, and my gatherer pounced upon it like a cat.

The decision of the referee was prompt; but, even so, it was almost lost in the sudden stir and murmur which arose behind us.

Some one came pushing through the crowd, and I turned to see a young girl clad in white lawn, a thin silver gray veil drawn tight under her chin. She ran up to the black boy who stood with the bird in his hand, handing by one wing. She caught it from him and held it against her breast, where its blood dripped her gown and hands.

"Stop this at once!" cried the girl. "Aren't you ashamed, all of you? Look, look at this!" She held out the dying bird in her hand. "Judge Reeves," she cried, "what are you doing there?"

Negro's Deed Worthy High Praise.

To have to swing a vicious and infuriated bulldog on the end of a broken chain in a circle over his head while a policeman fired several shots at the animal, was recently the thrilling experience of Peter Wilson of New York, a powerful negro, after he had rescued a child from the savage attacks of the dog. For more than ten minutes Wilson swung the dog around in the air, and was ready to all to the street from exhaustion when the animal was finally dispatched. All of the policeman's bullets went wild, and the dog was killed only after several men succeeded in trapping him into a helpless position against a collar grating.

War Against "Loan Sharks."

Lawyers engaged to assist poor people in New York who had been in the clutches of the "loan sharks," have reported that their clients took an aggregate of $8,299.66 in loans, on which they were to pay $2,741.71 in interest in three months. The lawyers in most cases were able to persuade the loan companies to continue the loans at the rate of 6 per cent annually. The loans had generally been obtained to pay doctors' bills or funeral expenses.

Benny on the Carp.

The German carp is a creature shaped so as to resemble a fish. It can swim in any kind of water, and has one eye on each side of its head. Its food consists of small black bass and three cornered pieces of boiled potato. You catch a carp by throwing a stone in the water to attract its attention and then letting down a hook baited with a nice piece of garbage. There are people in St. Joe who will pay ten or fifteen cents for a big fat carp, but as for me I would rather have a Welsh rabbit or a pound of angel cake.—"Benny," in the Chicago Tribune.

Unprofitable Activity.—It is the misfortune of the active that their activity is almost always somewhat senseless. The active roll like a stone in accordance with the stupidity of mechanics. All men are still divided as they ever have been, into bond and free. Asking Too Much.—"Nobody should be allowed to purchase anything from a pharmacist without a physician's prescription," said the cautious citizen. "Nonsense," replied the druggist. "You couldn't expect even a doctor to know the correct Latin for soda water and chewing gum."

Miser Makes His Landlord Administrator of Secreted Estate Which Proves a Revelation—Eccentric Bachelor Had Concealed Fortune.

Enid, Okla.—Had it not been for the honesty and high character of Gerhardt Thellen, a farmer living nine miles northwest of Enid, the fact that $11,000.05 cash and $2,000 in securities had been secreted in his home by C. F. Schulze, an eccentric bachelor who resided with him, would not have been disclosed following the death of Schulze. Thellen could have kept the money and no one would have been the wiser.

Thellen often had been promised by Schulze that what property he possessed would be left to him at death. But when death came to the former German soldier Thellen did not examine his property until he had conferred with an attorney. When Thellen was made the executor of the estate he called neighbors to accompany him into the room which Schulze had occupied.

Schulze died of pneumonia at 76 years of age. It was believed by Thellen that he had money hidden in his room. The $1 a week he paid for board had been forthcoming regularly in currency. Schulze was reticent and never spoke of his affairs even to the family except when he said he wanted the Thellens to have his property.

Following the death, Thellen came to Enid to consult attorneys on what should be done about the burial and disposition of the property. He was legally sworn as administrator and then he asked the help of two neighbors in search of the room.

Though it was believed that Schulze was well to do, what was found was revelation. The room where Schulze lived a bachelor's life eleven years was searched and the result was the finding of $11,000.05 in cash wrapped in old socks, sewed into vests, hidden in secret drawers and in every conceivable place. Every article of clothing yielded its treasure of gold coins or gold certificates. Every nook and corner seemed to conceal gold, every spot of the room seemed fraught with some secret known only to the dead bachelor who had amassed money but who had only strangers to care for him.

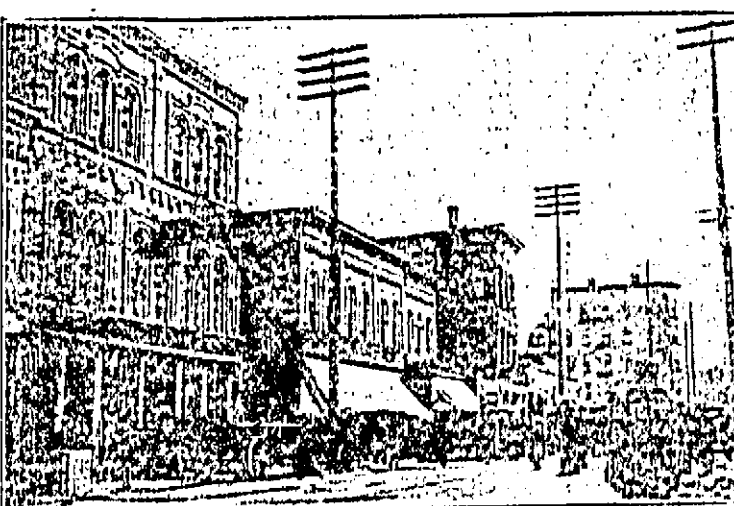

For years Schulze had worn a home-made muslin vest lined with $20 gold certificates of a value of $4,360. A vest found in a closet contained $1,010 in gold pieces. Old German socks had been used as gold sacks. Money seemed to be everywhere. Combination locks were frequently encountered in the explorations of the old man's effects. Hidden in a false bottom in an old hand-made chest was $4,260 in $20 gold pieces.

Besides the money, notes aggregating $2,000 were found in inconceivable places. Letters showing that the old man had negotiated loans in Texas were also found.

Arrests Thief on Visit.—Wabash, Ind.—Mrs. Edward Beck of Peru, Ind., captured a thief while visiting in this city and took him to the police station. Some time ago she hired a man to help her clean house. The man worked a little while and then stole Mrs. Beck's watch and left. Mrs. Beck saw the man on the street and recognized him. Not seeing any policeman, she made the arrest herself.

There are some people—and I am one of them—who think that the most practical and important thing about a man is still his view of the universe. We think that for a general about to fight an enemy, it is important to know the enemy's number, but still more important to know the enemy's philosophy.

'Long-Stroke' Means Long-Stroke

...IN THE NEW...

Hupmobile

We have figured always that it was the wisest kind of enlightened selfishness to give more than the public expected.

Thus, only one motor in America has a longer stroke than the engine in the new Hupmobile "32."

And the car which shares this distinction with the Hupmobile sells for several times the Hupmobile price of $900.

The relation of stroke to bore in the new Hupmobile is the mean average of the best and latest European practice.

But we did not stop with this positive assurance of greater pulling power.

The cylinders are cast on blue and the crank shaft, of special drop forged high carbon steel, equipped with three especially liberal bearings, instead of two.

Note these evidences of extra-generous construction, one at a time, please, and compare them with other cars at the Hupmobile price.

Observe that the valves, for instance, are an admirable advantage—yet instantly accessible and oil-tight and dust-proof.

Again, you find another evidence of careful workmanship in the manner in which the inlet and exhaust manifolds are cast integrally with the cylinder block.

You will also note the advance in construction that we have made by casting together, from the highest grade of aluminum alloy, the upper part of the crank case and the entire transmission case. This construction is completed by making the lower part of the crank case from pressed steel.

You will see in this engine and transmission unit a triumph of mechanical adaptation, which makes for increased efficiency and space economy.

The full-floating rear axle of the Long-Stroke "32" is, in itself, a work of high degree, which places the Hupmobile in an exclusive class.

The rear axle connection is by means of a single universal joint, enclosed in a tapered tubular housing which is joined to the transmission case.

By this means we avoid the use of truss rods, yet have produced the strongest and stiffest axle possible. Each rear wheel runs on two roller bearings mounted on the axle tube, while the axle shafts are bolted to the hub flanges.

You can ascribe all these constructive advantages to the fact that the Hupmobile organization has always been held practically intact.

In every essential it is the same as it was when the first Hupmobile was built.

The chief engineer, E. A. Nelson, is the same man who designed the original Hupmobile runabout—whose priority in its own class has never been seriously disputed.

The department heads who have been associated with Mr. Nelson and the skilled workmen who have executed his designs have remained with us in our progressive department.

THE IMPRISONED GHOSTS

By ELEANOR VAN HORN

The story of a night in a haunted house with wild noises all about, high words and pistol shots

Here is a ghost that is finally traced to its lair and forever laid at rest

L OCA historians used to call it Whitehall. That was in the days when one of Washington's officers lived there. Then, for immemorial years, the village folk called it the haunted house. It was a mansion of stately build, approached from the main road by a sweep of imposing driveway. It was large and square, with a pillared porch. Its lofty front windows looked out across an once beautiful garden, laid out like the gardens of Italy and France. But in the years of mystery and desertion, from grand magnificence into gentle decay, there were tangled masses of exotic flowers run wild. The box borders had been bitten out at intervals by the hungry winters of the past. There was a battered sun-dial, a dead fountain, a moss-covered marble seat, and mysterious paths.

It was here that the village boys and I used to play when the sun shone cheerfully and the day was young. The house exerted its spell upon us. We peered fearfully in at the windows and shook the strong old doors, then hurried away with shrieks of half-frenzied ecstasy. The house seemed to submit to these familiarities patiently. But it never lost, not even in the sunshine, that aspect of cheerless, unholy sorrow that made it awful.

Perhaps even then, subconsciously, I knew that I should spend a night of horror behind those white, unsmiling walls when I should have become a man.

II.

Here let me tell you something about the tragedy enacted there.

A quarter of a century before my birth, a wealthy bachelor, a grandson of that officer of Washington's already referred to, came to live at Whitehall, with an old housekeeper as his only attendant. He was not well known in the village, for his youth had been spent in foreign lands, and only till he came to live at Whitehall had the village people ever seen him.

He was tall and imposing, but his handsome face bore clearly the marks of a disipated and tumultuous life. A scar marked his cheek. He walked with a slight limp from some old wound. He dressed carefully, and bore the aspect of a great gentleman—a man of the world, with an intangible something about him that baffled my youthful analysis, but which marked him with distinction in sharp contrast to the gentle village folk.

Vague rumors filtered into the village as time went on, which gradually revealed the inhabitant of Whitehall to have been a man of much adventure; been in wars as a soldier or fortune; had been imprisoned, and had made his escape; had been an extraordinary figure at the court of France, and a destroyer of many a woman's happiness.

His manners were those of a Chesterfield, although he was reserved and inhuman to the last degree, and made no man his friend. He lived entirely within himself. He came and went about the village in that isolation of spirit that some are capable of building up for themselves, and which is as impenetrable as the heart of a Sahara. He received no letters, but many books and magazines and papers. He spent long days in his library. Occasionally he walked in his great garden, gathering the flowers as if he loved them.

Thus he lived until the day of a tragic visit. In those days a stage-coach carried mails and passengers to and from the village. It came and went every day, and the coach was always sure to be full; so that when a mysterious stranger, with a striking face and a foreign accent, was a passenger alighting at the village there were many to carry the news. The stranger's fine, erect figure was set off by a military coat. His beard was cut after a foreign fashion. When he asked at the inn how he might reach Whitehall, the word swiftly passed about that the lonely bachelor was to have a distinguished visitor.

The stranger gave the innkeeper a princely fee and was, in consequence, driven out to Whitehall in the innkeeper's own private chaise. Whitehall was opened by the old housekeeper, and the mysterious and attractive stranger swallowed from the sight of the youth, who looked longingly after him as he faded, the large silver coin in his hand. And that night was a night of terror in the village. The old housekeeper had come running wildly to the nearest house in her nightgown, with her eyes staring from her head and her nightcap awry. She was incoherent with terror and exhaustion, but it was gained from her broken speech that a tragedy had taken place at Whitehall, and that the master and his visitor lay dead.

Some of the village men ran to the house, entered the door that had been left wide open by the frightened housekeeper, and went up the stairs to the room the master had converted into a library, led by a light that was still burning.

The room was in great disorder. Sure enough, both men lay dead, their faces bruised and marked. One, the stranger, had been strangled. As for the master, he had evidently shot himself. He lay within a large closet, the door of which stood wide open, and across the sill trickled a stream of crimson. Upon each victim was found a miniature of a woman of extraordinary beauty, her lovely face smiling out coquetically from within a frame of pearls in one case and a plain gold ring in the other.

Whitehall, after the tragedy, fell to some distant cousin, and they came to live there. They stayed but a short time, however, departing suddenly and leaving a caretaker in charge of the place. The caretaker, in turn, left hastily, declaring that he had heard weird sounds at night, accompanied by pistol-shots, and that he knew that the ghosts of the two dead men enacted the tragedy every night in the old library.

Then the house was closed. The woods sprang up in the garden and sprawled into the trim walks, and Whitehall, dead within a year, became that strange every thing—a haunted house.

III.

When my childhood had passed, and I had traveled about a good deal in foreign lands and learned what fine architecture really was, I realized that the haunted house was of rare beauty and excellence, a gem of architecture such as one does not often chance upon in our good land, and so I looked upon its imposing frontage with longing, loving eyes.

I spent several summers in its vicinity in my early thirties, and each day I made it the object of a pilgrimage. I walked about its cloaked and neglected gardens, and examined its poor, weather-worn door-carpenterings with a pity that would have been penetrated to his heart—had it had one. For Whitehall seemed to me to be weighted down with mortification and despair. The sun might shine its brightest upon its windows, but they never could be made to have that smiling look that the windows of happier houses have.

The spring of the year that I became engaged to Lydia, I paid a visit of a week to the old town, and, of course, to Whitehall. It was a lush season. Nature was doing her very bravest, and the old gardens of Whitehall were struggling to assert themselves. There were surprising clumps of fine, old-fashioned flowers here and there, holding up their beautiful heads, but proudly, but rather triumphantly after all the years of neglect. I grew more and more fascinated with the place; it appealed to me as never before. My being in love may have had a good deal to do with this; but each day I was drawn to the old house, and spent hours about it, and even obtained the keys and wandered into all its rooms, cloaking over the rare woodwork and the strong, firm frame; and before I went away, I had responded to a sudden inspiration, and had rented the place for a year, with the privilege of purchasing. The price was ridiculously low, the haunting spirits that one was obliged to take with it being considered detrimental to the real estate value.

I was to be married in July, and here I would bring my bride. I knew what a wonderful and joyful surprise it would be to Lydia—for she regarded all superstition with a scorn, and would not have a plan for a honeymoon that would take her to some grand old room, still stocked with gems of antique furniture, moth-eaten and dust-laden. I sent directions for its setting in order, and hired a brave man to make trim the gardens.

At last, we came to our own. The joy of these first weeks will remain a happy memory forever. We arranged and admired and recovered, and repaid to our own particular taste, until our artistic sense was completely satisfied. We worked and dreamed away the hours and talked much of the history of the place, laughing at the absurdity of the haunted idea and pitying the narrow beliefs of the simple people; but, at the same time, we were over them because of the wealth of beauty they had contributed to our lives.

In September, Lydia was called to the bedside of her sister. She took the maid with her. The cook, who was left to take care of me, went to her own little home that night, so that I was quite alone in the house after nine o'clock. I was lonely, as a new bride, would be sure to be during such a separation, but I was happy enough in my own way.

The day before Lydia returned I received a call from one of the old residents of the town—the oldest inhabitant, I fancied, from his shrivelled and faded condition. I welcomed him as a character. He came in the bright afternoon, but seemed wary about entering the house, even with the glorious sunshine pouring in at the windows in a flood, and said he preferred a seat in the garden. He walked, and breathlessly assured me that he would not have made so great an effort had he not been impelled by an overpowering curiosity as to whether I had been troubled by ghostly noises, and also by the desire to tell me that this was the anniversary of the tragedy. It was a windy September night that it happened, he said, and he quite remembered how Aunt Sally Whitehall shivered and shook in her nightgown when she brought the horrible news.

I cheerfully assured him that we had not seen or heard anything of a disquieting nature, and had no fear of what might come.

He waved his shaggy fingers warningly and feebly shook his head as he said impressively: "You will yet, young man, you will. It's never failed to come on the night of the anniversary. You'll hear and see things to-night. This house has been haunted for nigh onto fifty years, and what's lived here has always heard wild noises—groans and creaks, high words, struggling, pistol-shots—two pistol-shots!"

Then, with a dramatic fervor that seemed like the good old man's last effort on this earth, he graphically re-lived every detail of the ancient tragedy. In spite of myself, I felt all its horror and its reality.

When he had finished, he departed, croaking slowly and with many a shaking of the head. I have to confess that he left a depressing effect, and I felt very lonely without Lydia. The golden days that we had lived in seemed very far away; and much as I liked to think of the gruesome past, I could not refrain from dwelling upon it with an awful fascination.

As night came, I found myself a prey to all the terrors of my youthful imaginings. Whitehall again became the haunted house; and in spite of all of my efforts to stave it off, I was fast falling into a fit of the blues. By the time that the clock laid I was genuinely depressed. The wind sprang up and moaned and sobbed dolefully about the house, sighing in the chimneys and shrieking wildly under the eaves. I read very late, and sprang into the lively action of a sprightly Viennese waltz, and hoped, like Stevenson, to carry the thread of that epic into my slumbers.

When midnight struck, the brands of the fire flared up. Thin went out, and I lay down my stirring romance, stretched and yawned, and decided to go to bed and sleep off my hapless mood. I got up and moved about the room, noisily, whistled and sang, swept up the hearth, locked the doors and windows, and tried not to hear the flendish wind. But I could not deny it. I was the victim of such a disquieting nervous tension, as I had never before experienced in all my life.

When I got to bed I huddled under the blankets and watched the cold moonlight flooding across the floor. The very floor, I thought, upon which the tragedy took place, for my bed-room had been the unfortunate lady's room. I was happy to find my feet really growing drowsy, and was just on the verge of slumber when I was suddenly shocked wide-awake by a sharp report near at hand.

"A pistol-shot!" I whispered, my flesh creeping with an unpleasant species of terror, for the sound came from the large closet in which the unfortunate inhabitant of Whitehall had died. It was now used as a storage closet.

I had half decided that my over-stimulated fancy had been playing me a trick, and was about to settle back upon my pillow, when another report, louder, clearer, sharper, came from the region of the closet, and made me jerk back to my sitting position.

"Two pistol-shots," I said to myself in an ominous whisper, recalling the old man's words.

All of a sudden I grasped hold of my senses and got back my manhood. A keen disgust of myself hastened a decision. I jumped out of bed, lighted the lamp, and made my way toward the closed-door of the closet. I held the lamp rather high, and its light shed itself sharply downward upon the floor where my eyes were attracted to something within its rays. I stooped—spreading slowly out across the sill from beneath the door was a crimson stain.

"Blood!" I whispered, hoarsely, and my own raw cold. My terror returned. I felt a sudden ghastly faintness, and I nervously moistened my dry lips with my tongue. The hand holding the lamp shook as with an ague, and this seemed to arouse me to a sense of my weakness. I felt as if I had disgraced myself by the weak fears and nervous vacillations of this night, and, suddenly, stung back into strength and courage by shame, I put out a steady hand and turned the knob. The door was locked. I shook it loudly and peered into the keyhole. There was no key within.

However, I was now determined to fathom the mystery, and, shivering in my thin nightclothes, I gathered keys from various drawers, upstairs and tried them in the lock. The last one grated a little and then the old back, and the door was unlocked. I set my teeth a little and held my breath with excitement as I swung back the door, holding the light well forward and peering within. For a moment I could see nothing. Then, meeting my eager gaze was a row of preserves jars, two of which had broken from fermentation and sent forth a crimson stream of fruit-juice.

"Lydia's preserves!" I said, and, setting the lamp down on the shelf, I gave myself up to a fit of uprisious laughter.

It is Lydia's chief story. She reveals in the telling of it, but I do not mind. It gave me an interesting night, and we pride ourselves upon being the owners of one of the most beautiful old houses in the land.

The Home Beautiful

Much of the satisfaction in owning your own home is experienced in furnishing each room in a decorative scheme in keeping with the interior finish. This the man of ordinary means is not inclined to do when he does not know how long he will occupy the premises.

A room finished in antique oak should be filled with antique oak furniture to match, and the drapery and rugs should also be purchased with the idea of correct harmony.

This is a matter of no great moment when you know it is likely that the furnishings and furniture will likely be worn out without moving. Owning your own home, even if a loan for the greater portion of the building expense is necessary, is a wise move, and creates a saving habit that cannot fail to be a source of great satisfaction.

An English Colonial house with a large front porch supported by four columns is greatly admired. Size over all 30x36 feet. Height of stories 9 feet 4 inches and 8 feet. Cellar, 7 feet, divided into 4 rooms. First floor of brick, gables and roof shingled. Hall, dining room and living room are finished in oak, with oak floors and borders, balance in pine. Lavatory on first floor has imitation tile wainscoting.

Cost to build $3,000 to $3,500, estimated.
